Fiction Projects

We know the formula by heart, and expect of our entertainment that it shall be rowdy, aggressive, and spectacular, culminating in the rise of the central character to fame in the bright lights of Broadway. Meanwhile, well-liked Kay Hamilton had a great success and rave reviews in a play the year before but has had no work since and is running out of money. You make the choices: Musical or Drama? On April 6, 1955, a 60-minute version of the play, written by , aired on the series.
